POETICAL.

THE OPENING OF THE PIANO.

In the little southern parlor of the house you may have seen,
With the gambrel roof, and the gable looking westward to the green,
At the side toward the sunset, with the window on its right,
Stood the London-made piano I am dreaming of to-night!

Ah me! how I remember the evening when it came!
What a cry of eager voices, what a group of cheeks in flame,
When the wondrous box was opened that had come from over seas,
With its smell of mastic varnish and its flash of ivory keys!

Then the children all grew fretful in the restlessness of joy;
For the boy would push his sister, and the sister crowd the boy,
Till the father asked for quiet in his grave paternal way,
But the mother hushed the tumult with the words, "Now, Mary, play"

For the dear soul knew that music was a very sovereign balm;
She had sprinkled it o'er Sorrow and seen its brow grow calm,
In the days of slender harpsichords with tapping, tinkling quills,
Or carroling to her spinet with its thin metallic thrills.

—Catharine, child of a neighbor, curly and rosy-red,
(Wedded since, and a widow—something like ten years dead),
Hearing a gush of music such as none heard before
Steals from her mother's chamber and peeps at the open door.

Just as the "Jubilate" in threaded wisper dies, "open it! open it, lady!" the little maiden cries. (For she thought 'it was a singing creature caged in a box she heard),
"Open it! open it, lady and let me see the bird!"

SELECT STORY.

KILLING AN OLD MAN.

A TALE OF THE OPHIR GOLD FIELDS.

It was shortly after the opening of the great Exhibition of 1851 that I set sail from England for the gold fields of New South Wales, with a heart brimful of hope and expectation, and pockets, boxes and portmanteaus made of sufficiently capacious dimensions to hold any amount of the precious metal (when found in addition to my somewhat scanty wardrobe.

Well do I remember the packing of that black leather portmanteau, and the swallow-tailed dressed coat that my mother would insist upon putting in, although having a presentiment that such articles of apparel were not "comme il faut" at the gold fields, I vigorously resisted the measure. I also remember the many dozen pairs of warm socks that had been manufactured with sisterly affection and gray worsted by the five girls—from Julia the eldest, aged 19, down to Susan the youngest, just turned 9. Finally, I have a distinct memory of how my maiden aunt, on the strength of her sixteen stone weight, jumped upon the aforesaid portmanteau and performed a kind of war dance thereon, so as to enable Tom the groom and Mary the housemaid to strap and lock it; and how, after many tears being shed by my father and mother, my brothers and sisters, and my maiden aunt in particular, I was whisked away to the railway station in order to catch the 9:45 A. M., train for London.

I will not dwell on the voyage out, because it was very much like other voyages. Suffice it to say that in just 100 days we arrived at Sydney, the capital of New South Wales, and here I discovered that the favorite gold field of the day was at Ophir, near Bathurst, 145 miles up the country. Here some tremendous finds had lately been made and people had been turning up nuggets like an Irishman shovels up potatoes.

When I look back at the splendid yields of the Ophir gold fields in those days, I cannot help ejaculating: "O-fer such times at Ophir to come o-fer again."

In due time, after a fortnight's weary journey in an ox cart, which also contained my cradle, my pick and shovel, my tent and other camp requsites, as well as my personal luggage, I arrived at the gold fields, having picked up more strange oaths on that short journey than I had heard during the whole portion of my previous life.

Drivers say that bullocks will not go without a lot of swearing, and I certainly believe that, after they have become accustomed to it, they will not budge an inch for any gentler language. I will tell you a very good yarn bearing on the point.

There was once a back country squatter who married a religious wife from the nearest township, forty five miles distant, and on one or two days later he sent down his largest wagon and ox-team to convey his fair bride and her bag and baggage to his station.

"Now, Tom," said he to the teamster, "the mistress is very particular; so, for the life of you, you mustn't let an oath out of your mouth all the way home. If you don't once offend her ears with your usual bad language, I'll give you five sovereigns on your return."

The man readily promised compliance with the desire, and promptly set out on his journey. He got to the township all right, for he threw his colonial curses right and left with his usual volubility, and the beasts understood the language only too well. On the return journey, however, when the newly-made wife was on board, the case was very different. In vain Tom balloed at the top of his voice. The language he now addressed to them might have been Hindustani or Sanscrit for aught they knew to the contrary, and when night came on they had only accomplished nine miles since the morning.

The next day it was just as bad, and at length they came to a hill, up which they would not go. "Crack! crack!" went the whip, and Tom's voice was used with Steutor-like effect, but still all was of no service; the oxen were obdurate.

At last Tom, seeing that moral persuasion was useless, approached the lady, cap in hand, and humbly asked:

"Please, ma'am, will you give me leave to swear at them there oxen? for they will never move till I do."

Seeing the necessity of the case, the lady at last consented. The effect was magical; addressed in the broad vernacular of the bush, the animals pulled together with a will, and reached the station in no time; but whether Tom got his conditionally promised five sovereigns I am not in a position to say.

I must now return to my original subject, for the reader will naturally ask, "What has all this to do with the Ophir gold fields and killing an old man?"

I found Ophir, then, a peculiar and yet a romantic looking place. Two hills rose in a pyramid shape toward the sky, both covered with gentle undulations, both thinly timbered to their summits. The lower slopes of these hills were thickley dotted with diggers' tents, and the Summer-Hill creek wound right around their base.

At the time I reached this gold field the diggings there were estimated to cover an extent of 300 miles, though eight months previously the existence of gold in any part of Australia was utterly unknown.

I lost no time in pitching my tent and making out a claim, and twenty-four hours later I was hard at work as the rest of them.

My tent was pitched in close proximity to one occupied by two strong, burly fellows of the old convict class, or at least such I set them down to be, on account of the odd way in which I fancied each of them lifted the left leg in walking, a peculiarity appertaining to most men who have been accustomed to perambulate in leg irons for any lengthy period. These men were always very civil to me, and of course I was the same to them, and yet somehow or other, I contracted a dread of them which I could neither overcome or combat; and when sometimes one or the other of them would stroll up, pipe in mouth; to the edge of my pit and ask me how I was getting on, I used to fancy that it was done to see whether I was turning up anything good, and consequently, worth robbing, and I used to conceal my gold in all sorts of out of the way places to elude their suspected designs.

One night I heard a horrid revelation that confirmed all my suspicions against these men. And now I come to the very subject matter of my story.

I have said that my tent adjoined that of my two mysterious acquaintances; in fact, the canvas of one tent touched that of the other; and from my tent I could hear the conversation they carried on in theirs very plainly. I had never before listened to their discourse, but one night, just as I was retiring to bed, I heard one say to the other, "Yes, this little knife did for him; I killed the old man with one blow, sir."

"Did you now? And did the fellow resist you?"

"Faith and he did," replied the assassin. "He grasped me till he nearly passed the life out of me, and tried to rip me with his spur; but I drove the knife into him up to the hilt, and then I cut his head off."

"Bravo, Charlie!" cried the other; "that makes the seventh old man we've killed since our arrival in the colonies, don't it?"

"No, the eighth," was the reply. Don't you remember the black fellow?"

"Oh, ay, to be sure, right you are," said the other; "but what have you done with the illustrious dead in this present instance?"

"Why, I left the body in the bush, with the exception of the legs, which are here in the tent."

The conversation here ceased, and was not resumed; in fact, a stentorian snoring soon told me that it was very improbable that it would be so, for that night, at the least; so I crept into my bed, not to sleep, (how could I, after so horrible a discovery?) but to reflect upon all that I had heard.

"The eighth old man they had killed! and one of them an unfortunate black fellow. Oh, the wretched miscreants!" I muttered to myself; and then my mind wandered away, and I wondered why it was that they murdered old men—how it was that their last victim tried to rip his murderer up with a spur—and what on earth had induced the assassin to cut off the victim's legs and bring them into his tent? At last, however, I did sink into a disturbed, unrefreshing slumber, and was afflicted by a frightful dream, in which I fancied that one of my next door neighbors was kneeling on my chest and cutting my throat from ear to ear.

My dream had in fact some slight foundation, for I was awakened by a rough hand shaking me by the shoulder; and my eyes, on opening them, rested on the roughly bearded face of the very man I had been dreaming of.

I was about to scream "Murder!" for I thought that my last hour had come; but, glancing around, I saw that it was broad daylight, and that the fellow was merely asking me for a match to light his pipe with. This I immediately gave him and he went away with a muttered expression of thanks.

That day, instead of going to work, I set out for the tent of the Police Commissioner and after a long walk succeeded in reaching it. I had to wait a very long time before I was granted an audience, but when I was ushered into the presence of the dread functionary and told him as succinctly as possible the circumstances of the case and how I had heard the rascals confess their numerous crimes, and particularly their last murder, the proofs of which were within their tent, the enthusiasm of the Commissioner was fully aroused, and he felt as anxious for their capture and punishment as myself. He suggested that two policemen, disguised as diggers and well armed, should come to my tent that evening on the pretense of paying me a visit as old acquaintances, and that after it was dark and the murderers had turned in for the night we should rush into their tent and secure them.

This was a very feasible plot and I heartily entered into it. So I minutely described the position of my tent, and, to make it more easily discoverable, I promised that a bright red pocket handkerchief should be hanging to some conspicuous part of it, as though to dry; and, having made all these arrangements, I took my leave.

Well, I got back to my abode about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and after a hasty meal, not wishing to lose a whole day, I went to my claim and set to for a three hours' dig. Strange to say, I had not been at work five minutes when I came across a very little nugget and a few minutes later picked out another as large as a crab apple. I was about to pocket this latter when I looked up and saw one of the assassins gazing down on me.

"Lucky find, mate!" said he, with a broad grin, that in my prejudicial mind seemed to say: "Ay, but it will be mine before long.

"Pretty well," I replied, brusquely, and he walked away.

I found no more nuggets on that occasion, and at 5 o'clock I knocked off and made my way to my tent, where after a good wash, I pulled an old gin-case outside, sat down on it, lighted my pipe, and coolly awaited the arrival of my visitors.

I had not to wait long. I presently saw two strongly framed men strolling leisurely in my direction, as though merely sauntering at random through the diggings. As they came opposite to me, one of them started, and, addressing me, exclaimed: "Hello, Ted, how long have you been at Ophir, and where did you hail from last?" and stepping up he grasped me warmly by the hand.

Seeing what was expected of me, I heartily returned the pressure, saying, in a loud tone, "Why, about three weeks. But when did you leave Sydney? Old friends like you and me should liquor up before questions are asked and answered," and inside we all three of us went.

One of the two men that we wanted to catch was an eye and ear witness of all this scene, but it was so naturally enacted that no suspicions that my two acquaintances were detectives could have entered his head.

I found that each of my visitors was armed with a revolver and a pair of handcuffs. They were both strong, powerful men, and more than a match for the others in every way. The plan however, to make all things certain, and to prevent any unnecessary spilling of blood, was to wait until the ruffians were in their beds and asleep, when we were to steal in and try to handcuff them before they could wake up.

We had to wait many hours for this time to arrive, but at last the snoring commenced in earnest, and this was our signal. Handcuffs in hand, the detectives crept into the adjoining tent, I followed them, with my revolver leveled, in case that one, or both the rascals should wake up and be too quick for them. They did not wake up, and the irons were clasped around and locked on their wrists without them even twinkling an eyelid.

But now they were roughly awakened, and the senior officer said, "Tom Jackson and Ben Wilton, I arrest you for wilful murder. You must both of you get up and come along with us. I am Detective Sinclair, of the New South Wales police."

I never saw two men so struck with consternation and surprise as were these two worthies. At last one of them gasped out, "Murder! Wilful murder! Detective Sinclair! Why, you must all be mad!"

"The evidence of their crime are in this tent, remember," I said to Sinclair, nudging him with my elbow. "Let us search for the limbs of their last slaughtered victim."

The hint was promptly acted upon. We seized spades and picks, and in ten minutes every inch of ground covered by the tent was turned over to a yard in depth.

No old man's legs were found; but we were not to be daunted, and proceeded to ransack the tents all over, still without any old men's legs turning up, though we spied two fine hind legs of a kangaroo hanging up in an obscure corner.

"Well, are you satisfied?" asked one of the prisoners. "Are you convinced that you are on some wild-goose chase? If so, take these cursed irons off and begone."

"No, we are not so convinced," answered Sinclair, with some asperity. "This worthy gentleman," pointing to me, "heard you confess last night to having murdered no less than eight old men, and such crimes will have to be accounted for. He heard you confess, too, to having hid the legs of your last victim in this tent; but doubtless you have this day removed them to some more secure hiding place."

"He told you that, did he? the young donkey!" screamed one of the accused, with an hyena-like laugh. "And so we have, too—old men kangaroos—and there are the legs we spoke of hanging up in that corner ready for to-morrow's pie. Ah! ha! ha! he has brought you on a fool's errand, sure enough," and the roars of laughter the two men indulged in fairly shook the tent.

Both detectives looked fearfully annoyed and yet they could not help laughing. Without a word to me they took the handcuffs off the men and returned them to their pockets. Then Sinclair said: "What will you take to keep this matter a secret? You see through this unfortunate new chum's blunder; we shall get laughed off the diggings unless you choose to be merciful. I'll give you a five pound note out of my own pocket if you will keep this unfortunate affair dark.

"I will supplement Sinclair's offer with the largest of the nuggets that I dug up to-day," I said, feeling that being laughed at was the general dread. I stood in the worst position of the trio.

"Hang your bribes!" was the retort. "I would not give up the chance of circulating so glorious a yarn for ten times the value of what you offer. However, I will tell it leniently as possible. And as for this new chum," turning to me, "when I first came to the colony, I and my mate here, are both of us green enough to have made just as stupid a blunder; so I can't blame him. Come, let us sit down, and have a drink all around of real old Jamaica rum, of which we have an unbroached keg in stock."

The invitation was readily accepted, and we kept it up until daybreak with grog, songs and toasts.

So ended the tragedy of "killing an old man," which I now learned was a name universally bestowed on a large male kangaroo. These animals, when attacked, are very ferocious, and if they cannot get away and are engaged at close quarters, will clasp you with their short fore legs, and pressing you tightly against their chest, will rise one of their strong hind legs, which is armed with a terribly long, strong and knife shaped spur, and rip you right down with it, causing almost instant death. When hunted with dogs the "old man" will generally, when once at bay, disembowel two or three of his canine adversaries before he is dragged down and dispatched, and the human foe is sometimes served in the same manner.

These two terrible murderers, as I thought them, turned out to be two right good fellows: one had been a cornet in a crack cavalry regiment at home, the other a curate of the Church of England. We soon became sworn friends and partners in what turned out afterward to be a well-paying claim, and in the year 1867 we all returned to Old England rich men.

Venus' Coming Transit.

AN ASTRONOMIC EVENT NO LIVING BEING WILL EVER SEE AGAIN.

The great astronomic event of the year will be the transit of Venus which occurs on the 6th of next December. The Scientific American says of it:

Astronomers have been busy for years in getting ready for the transit, for the whole Western world, where the sky is clear, will be in the sunlight during some portion of the passage. The busy notes of preparation are now being sounded in many of the American observatories, where every aid that science can command will be utilized for the occasion, while European astronomers have already formed their plans, received appropriations for the great expenses to be incurred, and chosen stations which are the best adapted for observations, as well as those that are at extreme distances from each other.

The phenomenon is not sublime and awe inspiring, like the total eclipse of the sun; nor simply beautiful, like the conjunction of two planets; nor magnificent, like the telescopic Saturn. The naked eye observer, looking at the sun through smoked glass, will see a tiny black spot passing over his face. The telescopic observer will see a black round ball, as large as the full grown moon, making its way across the great luminary. The phenomenon to the ordinary observer will be only this and nothing more. But thousands of scientific observers will eagerly note, as if life depended upon the accuracy, the second when Venus touches the sun's edge, the moment when she is fully embarked upon his disk, the exact time of her passage, and the second when her retreating edge touches the sun's edge, as well as the time when the last contact occurs and the exhibition closes. There are two principal reasons for the importance attached to a transit of Venus. One is that it is considered the best means for determining the sun's distance; the other is that it is extremely rare in its occurrence.

Venus and Mercury are the only planets that can make transits across the sun, for their orbits are within that of the earth, and they are therefore called inferior or inner planets. In every synodic revolution, or when earth, planet and star come into line, these planets must pass between us and the sun, the point being known as inferior conjunction. Venus accomplishes this period in 584 days. But her orbit, or path, is inclined to the ecliptic or sun's path, and, at inferior conjunction, she ordinarily passes above or below the sun and is invisible. When she is in inferior conjunction, and also at one of her nodes or crossing points, as in December, she passes directly between us and the sun and makes a transit. The transits at the descending node are in December, those at the ascending node in June. The intervals between are 8 and 235 years. The transit of 1874 occurred eight years ago; the next transit after that of 1882 at the same node will be in 2117. The last transit at the ascending node occurred in 1769; the next will occur in 2004.

When in 2004 the next transit of Venus after the coming one takes place, no human being who now treads the earth will be alive to see its passage. Nearly four generations of men will have lived and died before the brightest of the stars again passes between us and the sun when at one of her nodes. Observers will, therefore, witness an event to be remembered for a life-time, and, for this reason, independent of its scientific importance, the phenomenon will be eagerly anticipated. If astronomers can agree in their calculations and make the transit a means of accurately determining the sun's distance, a great feat will be accomplished. For the sun's distance from the earth is the unit or yard-stick for measuring celestial distances outside the solar system, and on its accuracy the whole celestial structure depends.

"Yes, sir, I'd shoot him."

Six or eight congenial spirits sat around a stove in a Grand River grocery the other night, and after several other objects had been exhausted some one introduced that of panics in churches, theatres and halls. This gave Mr. Hopewell a chance to remark:

"Gentlemen, I just long to be there."

"Where?"

"Why, in one of those panics. Yes, sir, I'd give a new twenty-dollar bill to be in a theatre one night when there was an occasion for a panic."

"Why?"

"Why, because one cool, level-headed man could stop the thing as easily as you could end up a barrel of flour."

"Well, I dunno about that," observed one of the sitters. "There is something awful in the cry of fire, and hear it where and when you may, it startles and frightens. What would you do in a theatre, in case of a cry of fire and a rush?"

"I'd stand right up in my seat, pull a revolver from my pocket, and shout out that I'd shoot the first man who attempted to crowd or rush. One cool man would check the panic in ten seconds."

While the subject was being continued the grocer poured a little powder on a board and gave three or four men the wink. Presently there was a bright flash, and yells of "fire!" and "powder!" and every man sprang up and rushed. Hopewell didn't spring up and talk of shooting. On the contrary, he fell over a lot of baskets that were piled between him and the door, got up to plow his way over a rack of brooms, and when he reached the sidewalk he was on all fours, white as a ghost, and so frightened that he never looked back until he reached the opposite side of the street.—Detroit Free Press.

Notice to Democrats.

Last day for paying taxes—Saturday, October 7th.

Last day for being naturalized—Saturday, October 7th.

The democrats of Lycoming county opened the campaign on Monday evening at Williamsport, by mass meeting at the court house, which was addressed by Chauncey F. Black and Mortimer F. Elliot. There was a very large attendance.

No earnest Democrat will be deluded into voting anything but his own ticket, by any of Cameron's side shows, whether it be called a workingman's candidate or what not. No true soldier will desert his colors at any time, especially not when victory is about to perch upon his banners

Beaver's speeches consist mostly of boasts of his own popularity, and assurances of his own election. He tells his audiences that the Independent movement has died out, although they are holding larger and more enthusiastic meetings all over the state than the Stalwarts. Beaver may be deceived himself, but he cannot fool the people with such chaff.

Republican organs are very much worried because Pattison will not neglect the duties of the important office he now holds to travel about the state exhibiting himself at county fairs and the like. Don't worry gentleman, Governor Pattison will take his turn after the election. Beaver is doing all the talking now.

A report was circulated that each of the clerks in Controller Pattison's office had been assessed $50 by the Democratic committee for campaign purposes. Mr. Pattison has corrected this report in the following language:

"Not one of my clerks has been assessed by any organization representing either the Democratic party or any other party. So far as I know not one of them has contributed one cent. The Chief Auditor is a Republican and identified with that party. I have not permitted my clerks to be assessed and shall not permit it."

The Stalwart managers will have to revise their schedule of campaign issues, change their candidates or import and naturalize a London tailor. While Beaver is howling about how faithfully the Stalwart party has stood by the doctrine of protection, his colleague on the Stalwart ticket—William Henry Rawle—sends to London for the clothes he wears to make a canvass in. In twenty years the Stalwart candidate for supreme judge has never worn a suit of clothes cut from American goods or made by an American tailor. He sends to London for every thing of the kind he needs, and the party that chooses him as its standard bearer has the effrontery to talk about protecting American industry and American mechanics. Watchman.

How is it to be Used.

The immense electioneering fund which has been raised by the stalwart state committee cannot be disbursed in the payment of legitimate expenses of the canvass. Printing, clerical services, postage and the expenses of stump speakers will not at the highest figure cost the committee above twenty-five thousand dollars. More than one thorough documentary and stumping canvass of the state has been made at less expense than the sum just mentioned. It is clear, therefore, that not one twentieth part of the half million dollars which have been collected by Mr. Cooper will be used for lawful and honest purposes. It is equally clear that this stupendous electioneering fund has been raised by the stalwart managers for the purpose of influencing the election by corrupt and unlawful means. Indeed it is the open boast of some of the more indiscreet Cameron henchmen that the bosses mean to "buy up the state." Forwarned is forearmed. The tactics of the Cameronian corruptionists are well understood. If the democrats of the state will but take counsel of their past experience the dirty money of the bosses will be spent in vain. The lesson of 1878, for instance, should be vivid in the recollection of every democrat. Thousands of dollars were spent that year by the Cameron committee in diverting democratic votes, from Dill to Mason. Colonel Quay the chairman of the committee, got control of the "greenback" canvass and managed it to suit himself. He stopped the organization of "greenback" clubs in republican thresholds and pushed it in the liveliest manner in democratic localities. He has his pimps and spies to officer "greenback" organizations and to run "greenback" candidates. He circulated republican documents through the agency of subsidized "greenback" committees. On the day of election his spurious "greenback" organizations saw to it that only members of democratic antecedents voted for Mason and that all others polled a solid republican ticket. He paid the bill for all this expensive imposture like a little man, although he was obliged to overdraw his bank account $40,000. Documentary evidence of the facts just stated is in existence and can be produced if a court of justice should require. The same Colonel Quay has recently been placed in supreme command at the republican headquarters in Philadelphia. He is even now attempting to repeat the tactics which were so successful four years ago. He will spend all the money necessary to draw votes from Pattison to Armstrong, to put up "greenback" local candidates as stool pigeons to delude unwary voters, to send spies into the clubs of the independent republicans, to buy corruptible newspapers, to induce anti-stalwart voters to stay away from the polls, and finally, if he shall have any money left or any bank to draw upon, he will round out his desperate scheme for the suppression of the will of the honest masses, by an effort to purchase a few thousand corruptible voters and to manipulate as many election officers as possible. Depend on it, there is nothing so desperately adventurous, so impudently audacious that it will not be attempted by the present management of the stalwart canvass, if thought necessary to the success of the Beaver ticket. The electioneering fund of half a million dollars means that the worst work of the worst of political desperadoes is to be performed in this state before the seventh of November. Let the people be on their guard.—Harrisburg Patriot.

Georgia was carried on Tuesday by the Democrats by a majority of about 30,000. Alexander H. Stephens was elected governor.

There was a large republican meeting in Philadelphia last Saturday night, at which Beaver was announced to speak on State issues. He made his speech but forgot to say anything about that subject. He dare not touch it, because he cannot assert his manhood without repudiating Cameron, and to do this would be his political death. The more Beaver talks the better it is for the Democracy.

The "Republican" will get one.

From the Phila. Press, (Rep)

Chairman Hensel, when he gets time, should write a card thanking the Stalwart organs for their silly attempts to connect Pattison with the Almshouse frauds. They are a big thing for the Democratic condidate.

Paying Her Mite to Cooper.

At the Regular Republican head quarters on Monday afternoon of last week, while Secretary Taggart and half a score of clerks were busy at desks and tables in the main room, a young girl, about eighteen years of age, of prepossessing appearance and plainly but neatly dressed, came in. Hesitating as she entered the room, in evident embarrassment she asked: "Is Senator Thomas V. Cooper in?"

"He is not," said secretary Taggart, rising and walking forward. "Can I do anything for you?"

"I've brought my money," said the girl, drawing out a well-worn old pocket-book and taking out two one-dollar bills. Secretary Taggart was at once himself again. Jumping into his chair at the table again, he asked the girl to sit down, while he opened a drawer and took out a book.

In Sona or Cooper's private room at the same time loud voices and boisterous laughter were heard, and there came out and filled the main room a thick cloud of smoke from fragrant Havana cigars. The smokers were Senator Cameron, who a few days ago, according to an enthusiastic and admiring Washington letter writter, sat before a safe of the Guarantee Life and Trust Company and clipped coupons for four hours, Secretary Quay and a few boon companions. They were telling funny stories and laughing over them.

Secretary Taggart, having opened his book, looked across the table at the young woman, who sat abashed, evidently unused to such scenes.

"How much is it?" asked the secretary.

"Two dollars," said the girl, tremulously.

She handed the money over, the secretary dropped it into a drawer, turned the key, entered the sum on a book and began to make out a receipt.

"What's your first name?" he asked.

"Emma," said the girl timidly.

Mr. Taggart wrote it out and handed her the receipt.

"I suppose," said the girl, rising as she folded the receipt, "every little helps."

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Taggart, mechanically.

"And it doesn't make any difference—my giving it to you instead of Mr. Cooper, does it."

"Oh, no," said the amiable secretary.

"Good-bye," said the girl, bowing as she withdrew.

"Good-bye," said Mr. Taggart, turning to his work.—Phila Times.

NEWS ITEMS.

The Grand Army of the Republic of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia held a reunion at Pittsburg on Monday. It was estimated that 50,000 strangers were in the city.

Prof. Tilden, who made a chemical examination of the poisoned bouquet that was given Guiteau by his sister, Mrs. Scoville, the day before his execution, reported to District Attorney Corkhill on Tuesday that the large bud contained five grains of "white arsenic." The original amount was greater, as the petals of the flowers failed to retain in a dry state some which adhered when moist. Corkhill says he is now trying to discover who it was that poisoned the flowers, and if the poisoner could be discovered he would be held to answer the charge.

8,366,000 bushels of salt were made on the Onondaga reservation, Syracuse, during the fiscal year ending with September. This is an increase over last year of 932,000 bushels, and the largest production since 1871. The receipts for duties from 1818 to 1812 inclusive were $4,265,478.

Baron Von Raub, Leon Springs, Bexar county, Texas, has 8000 acres all under fence, properly subdivided, and stocked with beautiful Shetland and spotted ponies. His breeding stock consists of seven stallions and forty-five mares, all thoroughbred, and 200 spotted pony mares. He is breeding a race of striped and spotted ponies to please the children. He sells the increase to persons all over the world, and the supply is not equal to the demand. These little ponies range over the praries like sheep or goats, and present a novel appearance—very gentle, every one as docile as a cat, and can be caught anywhere on range.

Judge Folger has accepted the republican nomination for governor of New York. Henry Ward Beecher says he would rather his right hand should wither than cast a ballot for a man nominated by fraud and forgery, and George William Curtis, editor of Harpers Weekly, which has always been a radical republican paper says:

That nomination was procured by the combined power of fraud and patronage, and to support it at the polls would be to acquiesce in fraud and patronage as legitimate forces in a nominating convention. Every good citizen is bound to resist to the utmost such a wrong to free institutions, and the only effecual way in which the voters can emancipate themselves from the corrupt and debasing rule of a machine is to defeat its candidates.

This I believe will be done decisively by the Republican voters of New York and Pennsylvania at the election of this autumn. They will see their party defeated rather than fraud and patronage triumphant. Events in both States show that no graver political peril now confronts the country than the complete subjugaton of party by unscrupulous cabals, which bribe with public employment and pay their way by filching from the public Treasury. This is an evil which will end in violence unless it is conclusively rebuked by the people at the polls."

Prohibition Convention.

Pursuant to call of the chairman of the county committee, the Prohibitionists of Columbia county met in convention, in Ellis Eves & Brother's hall, at Millville, at 2 p. m., on Friday, September 29, 1882.

The convention was called to order by the Chairman, and the call read, stating the object of the meeting.

The minutes of the last meeting were then read and adopted, after which a motion was made that a committee of three be appointed by the chairman to prepare resolutions, which was carried, and in accordance therein, Aaron Smith, John Bodine and Ellis Eves were appointed. While the committee were performing their duties several persons favored the convention with short addresses.

On motion the State ticket nominated by the Prohibition convention at Altoona was endorsed.

The committee then reported the following resolutions which were adopted:

1 Resolved, That we hereby declare it to be the purpose of this convention to nominate and support only such candidates for the Legislature as are believed to be unequivocally in favor of submitting to a vote of the people an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for use as a beverage, within the commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

2. Resolved, That we as members of this convention will support the nominees of the Prohibition party at the polls as well as elsewhere.

3. Resolved, That we endorse the platform of the Altoona convention.

4. Resolved, That we congratulate the Prohibition people of Iowa and Kansas on their success in securing prohibitory amendments.

The convention then proceeded to the nomination of candidates.

For the offices of Congressman and State Senator no names were presented. Webster Eves and John Bodine being chosen congressional conferees, and Aaron Smith and G. A. Potter, senatorial conferees, with instructions to support such candidates as would in their judgment best serve the interests of the party.

After considerable discussion as to the expendiency of nominating two candidates for the office of representative, E. M. Tewksberry was nominated and Geo. W. Supplee, the republican candidate, endorsed.

For Sheriff M. C. Woodward was nominated.

For jury commissioner, Aaron Smith was nominated.

For coroner, V. P. Eves was nominated.

On motion the following were elected as officers of permanent organization:

Aaron Smith, chairman, (he to appoint one man in each township to assist him in the work of the campaign) J. B. Eves, secretary, and G. W. Correll treasurer.

Jacob Kester, Shadrack Eves, G. A. Potter, Susan W. Heller and Mrs. Walker, were appointed a committee on finance.

An effort was then made to raise money, to meet necessary expenses, with very satisfactory results.

A vote of thanks was tendered the proprietors for the use of their hall.

Adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

G. A. Potter, Sec'y.

The cars were loaded principally with the baggage of the company. Several attaches were scattered through the train. Three men were instantly killed, three probably fatally injured and seven or eight others seriously wounded. A tiger escaped from a cage, but was secured before doing any damage. The engine and three front cars escaped unmjured.

INVITATION.

Strangers passing through the city are cordially invited to visit the store, and make free use of its conveniences; leaving their luggage under check at any of the doors, or in the Luggage Room in the Department of Public Comfort.

Really we meant to have this important department in full operation before everybody got back from sea and mountain. It is made for strangers; and they seem to enjoy it, so far as it has got. It consists of a free Reading Room for gentlemen, a free Resting Room for ladies, free writing-facilities in both, closets, and other little conveniences; a soda and mineral-water fountain that isn't free; and a lunch-room to be added.

We make the great public welcome there, beyond the wont of any other house, so far as we know. We think it will pay us to look after Public Comfort a little, as a means of advertising. There's nothing sly or crooked about it. We want visitors to Philadelphia to have a good time, and to connect our store with it.

New things are coming, and fall trade is already begun. New things do not come all together. They come in a steady stream from now till Christmas. And they go in the same way. They have to. You may easily believe it, when you see our house full all the time, of goods and of people taking them away. It would be hardly worth speaking of so obvious a fact, but for the moral; which is: Buy when you find what you want; for tomorrow somebody else will be after it.

New things will crowd upon us now for mention every day. Only a few can get into the papers, except in the most general way. It will be fair to come for whatever you want, and expect to find it.

New foreign wraps have come. There are jersey coats, jersey ulsterettes, pelisses, and others. The writer of this hasn't even seen them. He has only heard of the flutter they are going to make.

Wonderful silks have come. But we must say more about the least of them than we have time for today.

We have neither time nor knowledge today to go into particulars. This is only an early notice that the store is filling up with goods for fall.

We need to say further to you who live at a distance that you needn't go to the city every time you want anything. We take so much pains to send you what you want, that you risk little in writing for goods. Let us know, as nearly as you can, what you want, and we will send you samples and prices, or take other means of finding out exactly what you do want.

Mottoes at D. Lowenberg's store: Best materials, Superior finish, Latest styles, Perfect fits and Popular prices.

We are informed that there is some talk of having the run on Fourth street between Market and Centre, covered with a stone culvert, and hope that the project may be carried out. The town authorities could not spend money in any way that would add more to the advantage of the people. The run is a natural outlet for sewerage, and no doubt will some day be utilized as a drainage for at least half the town.

A new use has been discovered for potatoes. They can be converted into a substance resembling celluloid by peeling them and after soaking in water impregnated with eight parts of sulphuric acid, drying and pressing between sheets of blotting paper. In France pipes are made of this substance, scarcely distinguishable from meershaum. By subjecting the mass to great pressure billiard balls can be made of it rivalling ivory in hardness.

Just as soon as the Bicycle race is over at the Fair grounds, crowds will rush at once to buy their Fall and Winter clothing at D. Lowenberg's.

Caw's Black Fluid is the only known ink that is positively non-corrosive to steel pens.

Flows freely; does not thicken by exposure, and has the decided advantage of writing black at first. It will not fade or mould; deposits no sediment, and is not injured by freezing. The best ink for use in fountain pens of all kinds. For sale by Elwell & Bittenbender.

Meyers, the young man who killed Hufnagle at Nescopeck last July, an account of which we published at the time, was sentenced at Wilkesbarre, on Friday last, to pay a fine of $50, and costs, and a term of six months in the county jail. His previous good character, the recommendation of the jury to the mercy of the court, and it not appearing that there was any intention to do serious injury, led the court to impose this light sentence.

Democratic Meetings.

There will be a meeting of the Democracy at the Opera House in Bloomsburg on Thursday evening October 12th, at half past seven o'clock, which will be addressed by Gen. William McCandless of Philadelphia, and Hon. C. R. Buckalew. Also at Catawissa on Friday evening, October 13th, at half past seven, when Gen. McCandless and other speakers will be present. Turn out, for Pattison and Reform.

This is no Humbug, call and be convinced—see for yourselves—ask your friend's advice, get your wife, or sister, or brother and they will tell you the right place to buy your clothing, ready-made, or made to order, is at D. Lowenberg's.

A Big Establishment.

We recently dropped in the popular clothing store of David Lowenberg, and were astonished to find such a large and well selected stock. He carries as many goods as many of the large city stores, and his prices compare very favorably with the lowest. In addition to his stock of clothing is a fine assortment of cloths, cassimeres, beaver, melton diagonals, Trunks, robes and everything that can be found anywhere in the large clothing houses. Mr. Lowenberg is one of our most enterprising citizens and his large trade is well deserved.

A Painful Accident.

J. D. Bodine of Mainville met with a very painful if not fatal accident last Saturday evening by the explosion of a gun. The weapon had been loaded for some time, and the charge was drawn all but the powder. Several caps were used in an attempt to discharge the powder, but the weapon hung fire. Bodine then placed the muzzle in his mouth to blow into the barrel when the explosion occurred. His mouth and throat were badly burned, and it was feared for a time that his throat would swell shut, but according to late reports that danger has past, and the doctors have hopes of his recovery. Mr. Bodine is well and favorably known through the county, having served as Mercantile appraiser, and also through the state as Grand Marshal of the Patriotic order Sons of America. We hope to hear soon of his recovery.

It is no use talking, says Brown, when I go to the Bloomsburg Fair I am going to buy a good overcoat at the popular clothing store of D. Lowenberg; he can always suit me and give me satisfaction.

Daniel Mistook his Man.

Berwick was the scene of a spirited tussle the other day. D. F. Seybert attempted to compel a girl who had been working for him to change her purpose of leaving. She had taken the train for Wilkes-Barre when Seybert reached the depot, He took her from the car and was maltreating her when a Philadelphia drummer came to her rescue. The drummer was too much for Daniel and forced him to let the girl go on her way. The next morning the man of many lawsuits appeared at the depot with the avowed purpose of punishing the "commercial tourist," who had remained in town over night. The man of the grip-sack was there to take the train and Daniel, pulling off his coat, squared for the fight. He let one of his fists fly at the drummer, but failed to hit his antagonist, but on the contrary was floored himself. A desperate struggle ensued in which Daniel was so badly hammered that his most intimate friends didn't know him. The drummer proved to be game and escaped without being hurt. The affair drew quite a crowd and has created a sensation.—Shickshinny Echo.

Our school suits are just what parents are in want of, made from good wear-resisting fabrics, suitable for school or play. Bring the boys to the popular store of D. Lowenberg and buy their fall suit.

Berwick Bits.

The Jackson & Woodin Co., have a contract for 800 cars and are not likely to suspend work except for sufficient time to make repairs.

The work of grading streets is being pushed along rapidly and our town will soon present a respectable appearance in that regard.

The Y. M. C. A. lecture course opens up next Thursday with a lecture by Prof. Sheppard, subject: "Why did she marry him?" The lecturer has a fine reputation and a big house will greet him here—over one hundred and forty season tickets were sold on the day the diagram was opened up.

A. W. Dickson one of our young merchants leads to the altar, Miss Sallie Frear on Thursday next. Singular, as the lecture, at night will explain "why she married him."

The bishops of the M. E. Church will hold a conference here some time in next month.

Pay-day was very quiet last Thursday, the boys seemed to hold on to their dimes somewhat afraid that work would be scarce, but the prospect is favorable and our people breath easier.

Berwick people are pleased to learn of the improved outlook for Bloomsburg in the establishment of the new industry and universal congratulations are freely offered to her enterprising citizens who have been the means of securing so desirable an acquisition.

One of the many attractions during our county Fair will be the large and well assorted stock of clothing now on exhibition at the store of David Lowenberg.

Council Proceedings.

Council met at 7 o'clock p. m., October 4th. All members present except Mr. Hassert.

On motion the Secretary was ordered to purchase six chain police nippers and one of Phillips' patent nippers.

In the matter of the removal of the dead from the old burial ground of St. Paul's P. E. church, it was referred to the President and town solicitor for investigation.

On motion a committee was appointed to examine the run on the north side of Fourth street with a view to covering it with a stone arch, and report at next meeting.

A petition was presented asking the council to take some action in regard to proper drainage and sewerage for the town.

Street commissioner was instructed to notify property owners on north side of Main street near Normal school, to lay their pavements within ten days.

Town Surveyor was directed to fix the grade on First street between Market and Iron.

It was ordered that a single crossing be laid on second street from Fetterman's building to Isaiah Hagenbuch's.

On motion it was ordered that hereafter no parties be allowed to clean cess pools, without a permit from the Town council, and that no persons or parties be allowed the privilege to clean cess pools except between the hours of ten p. m., and four a. m., and only on application for permit from President of town council.

Albert Herbine was appointed police officer.

The crowd during Fair will be found looking at the Fall and Winter goods at D. Lowenberg's.

Personal! To Men Only!

Voltaic Belt Co., Marshall, Michigan, will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with Nervous Debility, Lost Vitality, and manhood, and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy relief and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above. N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days' trial is allowed. Oct. 28, '81-1y

If George Washington had ever come to Bloomsburg he would certainly have bought his clothing at the reliable store of D. Lowenberg.

Among the candidates for favor with the music loving world is the Ivers & Pond piano.

No better evidence of their merit could be given than that they have been selected for use in the New England Conservatory of Music at Boston, where they are made.

That the management should purchase fifty Pianos of this make is conclusive evidence of their confidence in the instrument. Had they entertained the least particle of doubt as to the durability or perfection of the IVERS & POND PIANOS, they would have acted more cautiously and purchashd a few of these instruments for trial. But this was not the case; they were entirely satisfied that the IVERS & POND PIANOS were as nearly perfect as could be made, and having arrived at that conclusion, adopted them for use at their conservatory.

J. Saltzer of this town is agent for these pianos, and has them on exhibition at his ware rooms. From personal examination the writer is satisfied they are just what they are represented to be.

Boys cry, children sulk, and old men get mad when they cannot get to Bloomsburg to buy their hats, at D. Lowenberg's.

Bi-Centennial Notes.

That the people of our county may know the many attractions of the celebration in Philadelphia, we will note from time to time the main features of the various days.

Tuesday, October 24th, is set apart for the representation of the landing of William Penn at Blue Anchor Inn, now Dock Street wharf Philadelphia. (Dock Street runs from third Street between Chestnut and Walnut south-easterly to the Delaware River; the wharf being between Spruce and Pine Street, the second and third streets south of Walnut.)

The Decorations of river and ocean craft will be of a magnitude without parallel in the history of Philadelphia; and on the same day the civic processions will be on a scale of unusual grandeur.

Firemen, with apparatus, comparing the different systems of years gone by with the present, from the old bucket and hand-engine to the steam-engine, and its plug and suction connections, will form the second grand feature of the day.

Fire companies from all parts of the State, and many from adjoining States, will take part in the procession, and the display promises to be larger and finer than any firemen's parade which has ever taken place.

Look out for later announcements of cheap excursions to Philadelphia from the various points on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad and do not miss seeing the finest series of processions ever inaugurated.

Grand display of fireworks in the evening.

Wednesday, October 25th, trades' display and Welsh singing societies; moving tableaux throughout the streets in the evening.

Thorough description of Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday processions will be given in subsequent numbers.

Get ready to go, and do not forget the days and their attractions.

A Good Article.

For the past four years the well known house of Baugh & Sons, 20 S. Delaware Avenue, Phila'd. have been offering to our farmers their superior phosphate for wheat, tobacco, corn and other crops. This was the first firm to learn that farmers could not afford to pay from $40 to $60 per ton for a fertilizer and they set to work to manufacture an article for less money, but to contain all the virtues of the high priced article.

They are now manufacturing and selling a phosphate for $25 per ton on cars or boat in Phila., which has been tried and found just what the farmers need. Large numbers of farmers have used it and recommend it to their neighbors. For circular showing guaranteed analysis address

A Famous Sea-Fight.

BY NOAH BROOKS.

When I was a small youngster, years ago, we boys used to be told thrilling stories of what was called "The Last War." In these later days, we have had a war on our own soil, which let us hope, the last war that we shall ever be engaged in as long as the American Republic lasts. But boys of an older generation than this knew "The Last War" to be between the United States and Great Britain, now generally called "The War of 1812." Happily, though the contest was not a long one, Americans can look with pride at the American navy of that period. The names of Bainbridge, Hull, Decatur, Porter, Perry, and many other gallant sailors, will be remembered as long as the traditions of the United States navy endure.

In 1813, the frigate "Essex," commanded by Captain David Porter, after committing such havoc on the British marine of the Atlantic coast of South America, sailing boldly around Cape Horn into the Pacific Ocean. Porter had resolved to strike out into a new field of operations, and carying into the Pacific the first American flag that had floated from the mast-head of a man-of-war, he swooped down upon the British merchantmen and whalers, causing tremendous consternation. Nobody had dreamed that the Yankees would dare to send a man of-war into this distant sea, and the British frigates were making things very uncomfortable for the few American merchantmen engaged in the Pacific trade. The arrival of the "Essex" soon changed all of that. Within a year she had captured four thousand tons of British shippings, and had taken four hundred prisoners. She may be said to have subsisted upon the enemy, as the vessel was not only supplied with everything needed for repairs, rigging, ammunition, clothing, and provisions, taken from the enemy's captured ships, but the men were paid with money found on board of one of her prizes.

Orders were given that the "Essex" must be destroyed, at all hazards, by any British man-of war that should be fortunate enough to catch her. But the American frigate was fleet, and difficult to catch. Finally, in February, 1814, the frigate, accompanied by a small craft called the "Essex Junior," a cruiser made over from one of the prizes captured from the British by Porter, cast anchor in the harbor of Valparaiso, Peru. The Peruvian Government was not then independents. Peru, being a province of Spain. But Valparaiso was a neutral port, although the people of Peru, and the Spanish, also, were somewhat unfriendly to the Americans. So, when two British men-of-war, the "Phœbe" and the "Cherub," entered the port, it was tolerably certain that there would be a fight, should the "Essex" dare to put out to sea.

The Englishmen had the redoubtable "Essex" and her little consort in a trap. For six weeks, the two British vessels kept a very close watch on the Americans, sailing up and down the coast, just outside of the entrance to the harbor. Finally, on the 28th of March, Captain Porter trusting to outsail either of the British vessels, and drew them away, so that the "Essex Junior" might escape, set sail and drew out of the anchorage. In doubling a headland at the entrance of the harbor, the "Essex" was struck by a squall, which carried away her maintopmast and several men. Captain Porter returned toward the roadstead, and anchored three miles from the town and about the distance of a pistol shot from the shore. The "Phœbe" and the "Cherub" had had been exchanging signals, and it was evident that they meant to attack, although the vessels were all in neutral waters.

The "Phœbe" carried thirty long eighteen-pounders and sixteen thirty-two pound carronades for her armament, besides seven small guns in her tops. She also had 320 men, all told. The "Cherub" carried twenty eight guns of various caliber and 180 men. To meet this formidable force the "Essex" had 225 men, and her arment consisted of twenty-six thirty-pounders and six long twelve pounders. The "Essex Junior," which took no part in the fight, had twenty guns and sixty men. Nevertheless, Porter resolved that he would never surrender as long as he had men enough to work his guns; and right manfully did he hold to his resolutions.

The Phœbe" opened fire at four o'clock in the afternoon, being then nearly dead astern of the disabled "Essex." The long eighteens of the Englishmen did great damage on board the "Essex," which, notwithstanding her disadvantage, returned the fire with gallantry and spirit. The "Cherub," then on the starboard bow of the "Essex," next opened fire also, but was driven off by the guns of the Americans. Three of the long twelve-pounders of the "Essex" were then got out astern, and played upon the "Phœbe" with such terrible effect that she, too, was hauled off for repairs, many of the shot having struck below the waterline.

Both the British vessels now closed upon the American frigate, being on her starboard quarter, and poured into her a fire so galling that the spars and rigging of the doomed ship were soon in a tangle of wreckage. Porter slipped his cable, and, hoisted his flying-jib, bore down upon the enemy, pouring broadsides into them as the ship slowly drifted. The "Cherub" was driven off for a second time, and the "Phœbe" retired out of the reach of the guns of the "Essex," but near enough to worry her with her long range ordnance. After two hours of fighting, Porter tried to run his vessel ashore, to prevent her falling into the hands of the enemy; but a change of wind prevented, him, and he anchored once more, making fast a sheet-anchor with a hawser.

Very shortly after, the hawser parted, and, to increase the trials of these determined heroes, the ship took fire below deck. In his extremity, Captain porter told his men to save themselves as best they could. Some threw themselves into the sea and swam to shore, some were drowned, and many were picked up, while clinging to bits of wreck, by the boats of the enemy. But a larger part of the crew staid by the ship, and continued firing into the enemy, in the midst of the smoke and flames. Finally, the fire was partly subdued, and men enough to work two of the long twelves kept up a brisk fire.

But further resistance was useless. Only seventy-five men were left to do duty, the remainder being killed, wounded, or missing. So, after an engagement had lasted two hours and a half, Porter with a sorrowful heart, hauled down the America flag, and the wreck of the gallant "Essex" was surrendered to the foe. The British lost four killed and seven wounded on the "Phœbe," and one killed and three wounded on the "Cherub." Both ships were badly crippled, their sails and rigging being riddled, and the "Phœbe" had received eighteen shots below water-line from the long twelves of the "Essex." Thousands of spectators crowded the shores to gaze on the bloody encounter. The Spanish Viceroy was plainly entreated by the American Consul to insist upon the maintenance of neutrality. He refused to interfere.

Thus ended one of the most remarkable naval engagements of modern times. It ended in disaster to the American cause. But the heroic defense of the "Essex," in which officers and men who vied with one another in a determination not to give up the ship, fired with fresh enthusiasm all who heard the story of their brave and obstinate fight. And, when the young people of this republic shall celebrate once more the deeds of the patriotic defenders of the Americn Republic, let them give a hearty cheer for David Porter and his crew.

Cocoa and Chocolate.

Probably few of our readers, while drinking these favorite beverages, have ever thought to ask how the plant producing them grows. Yet its culture forms a large part of industry, not only of the great Amazonian valley, but of other portions of tropical South America.

The cocoa (Theobroma cacao)—the name signifying "food of the gods"—is a small tree, or rather large bush, seldom exceeding fifteen feet in height, although we have seen very old trees which were thirty feet high. It has large, oblong, taper-pointed leaves, which, when young, are rosy and very beautiful. The flowers are small, fragrant, yellowish, and are borne in clusters on the trunk and larger branches. The fruit is about twelve inches long, varying, however, greatly in size, and about five broad; it is oblong, blunt, and is marked with ten elevated ribs running lengthways, and is, when ripe, of a bright orange yellow, with a hard shell. Although authorities state that the fruit contains from fifty to one hundred seeds, we have never been able to find one containing fifty; the average is from thirty to forty-five. These seeds are embedded in a white, semi-acid pulp, and in size and shape somewhat resemble almonds; it is from these seeds that the cocoa and chocolate of commerce are prepared.

The fruit is, when ripe, gathered by hand, and broken transversely by a large knife; the mass of pulp and seed is taken out, and is either left for a day to slightly ferment, or is at once put into a "tipici" and pressed almost dry; it is then dried from one to three days in the sun, and is then ready for market. A "tipici" is a tube of wicker-work, about eight feet long, with a diameter of about ten inches; the top is open, and at each end there is a loop; the tube is filled with any substance to be pressed, hung upon a peg or branch by the upper loop, while a lever, upon which a woman sits, is inserted in the lower loop, the tube contracts, and the juice runs out through the interstices.

The juice running from the "tipici" is called "vinho da cacao," or "wine of cocoa," and is a most refreshing and delicious drink; it is slightly acid, aromatic, and possesses a flavor es pecially its own. Unfortunately, it soon ferments, and can be preserved in its freshness for only a single day; by boiling, however, fermentation is checked, but all the delicate aroma of the wine is lost. It is almost worth a voyage across the Atlantic to drink the wine of cocoa in its freshness. This drink is very healthy, and one can consume an immense quantity. A superior white vinegar is also prepared from the cocoa. The juice is also boiled down into a sauce which in color and taste much resembles Shaker apple-sauce; and a most delicious amber-colored jelly, far superior to guava jelly, is made from the wine, from which also a strong and very high-flavored brandy is distilled. The husks contain a large amount of potash, and are burned to yield a lye which is used in making soap. Great quantities of the Cocoa fruit are annually destroyed by monkeys and parrots, which are very fond of the seed.—American Garden.

No Excuse for Neglig ence.

The principle of law that relieves an employer from liability to an employee for injuries that have been caused by the negligence of a co-employe has been carried to a great length by the Court of Appeals in a decision rendered in the suit of William L. Harvey, executor, etc., against the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company. The action was brought by the plaintiff to recover for the killin of his son, who was a fireman on the railroad and whose death was caused by a misplaced switch at the Lyons Depot in January, 1877. It was claimed that the railroad company was negligent in not employing a sufficient number of competent switchmen at that station. It appeared by the evidence of the man whose negligence caused the accident, that he was more than sixty years old; that he was taken from the position of baggageman and made a switchman against his own will, and that he had more duties to perform than onght to have been required of him. But it was also shown that his work required little skill, and that when the accident happened he had just let a local train out of the freight yard at the Lyons station, and then, forgetting to re-adjust his switch, had walked down to the depot. There he seated himself on a box and entered into conversation with a friend, and, while thus engaged, young Harvey's train came along, ran off the misplaced switch and Harvey was killed. On the first trial the justice non-suited the plaintiff. The general term granted a new trial, holding that the question should have been submitted to the jury as to whether the company was negligent in employing an incompetent man or an insufficient number of men to care properly for the switches. On the second trial the jury gave the plairtiff a verdict for $3,000, and this was sustained by the general term. The Court of Appeals has now set aside the judgment of the lower courts, Judge Tracy writing the opinion. It is held that even if the switchman was not fully qualified to perform the duties of his position at the time he was employed, he had ample opportunity before the accident to qualify himself; that it was of no consequence that the company required service of him that he could not properly perform, since when the accident happened he had abundance of time in which to re-adjust the switch; that, therefore, the primary cause of young Harvey's death was the negligence of a co-employe, for which the master was not liable.—New York Tribune.

Effect of Heat on Hogs.

Pigs generally gain very little during the summer on account of the neglect on the part of their owners to provide for their comfort. In some cases their skin cracks open by the influence of the direct rays of the sun, and sores are formed which are infested by insects. The large amount of fat contained in the body of the hog renders it impatient of heat, and means should be provided for rendering the animal as cool as possible. The pasture in which hogs are kept should be well supplied with water, not only for drinking but for cooling purposes. If there are no natural streams or ponds there should be pools made in which they can wallow if they desire. They should have plenty of grass and other green food, as well as sour milk and slops. Corn and other heating articles of food should be fed sparingly. Cooling shade is essential to the comfort and well being of hogs during the hot days of summer. Farmers who have the advantage of groves and forests located on the banks of streams and rivers, or on the shores of lakes, generally have little trouble during the summer. The ground protected by the trees and bushes remains cool and moist even when that exposed to the rays of the sun is parched and hot. The streams and ponds afford water for drinking and bathing. The hog is a cleanly animal when it is allowed a fair chance. If a hog pasture contains no natural shade or water they should be provided. Water can be conducted through pipes from springs and wells at a small expense and made to supply pools and watering troughs. Shades can be afforded by planting trees or erecting sheds covered with straw or running vines.

DRUGGIST'S TESTIMONY.

H. F. McCarthy, druggist, Ottowa, Ont., states that he was afflicted with chronic bronchitis for some years, and was completely cured by the use of Thomas' Eclectric Oil.

The Bad and Worthless

Are never imitated or counterfeited.

This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value.

As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B.

Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously cunningly devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits.

Beware of them. Touch none of them, but: Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits. (2)
